The mere mention of anal gills put the class into a bit of a tailspin.

"That's kind of gross," griped Jennifer Weismantle from the deck of the Pittsburgh "Voyager," amid her classmates' mumbles and chuckles.

But how else do you keep a group of fifth graders interested in a dragonfly's respiratory anatomy (which, incidentally, also serves as a convenient enemy-escaping jet propeller in dire circumstances)?

"They squeeze their butts real tight then take off."

If Instructor Valerie Talsma did not have their attention before, she had it now.

The class of Quakers listened intently while

Talsma described different types of immature macro-invertebrate one might find at the bottom of the Ohio River. She kept things interesting by providing insight into how these critters live in and adapt to modern environments.

For instance, the mayfly, which carries its lungs on its back, is an "intolerant" species. It cannot thrive in polluted waters, unlike mosquitoes, which, she explained, have a two-week life cycle and so are not too fussy about cleanliness.

All of these small lessons tied into an inclusive educational expedition focusing on the rivers' ecosystems. The program, "Environmental Science on the Three Rivers," takes place aboard two 80-foot, 70-ton floating science labs called the "Voyager" and "Discovery."

Board nixes Act 72, holds mills at 16.9

By Dona S. Dreeland

Editor

They said no unanimously — to Act 72 and to a millage increase to meet next year's school expenses.

Last week, Quaker Valley School Board adopted the new budget, which would keep the tax rate at 16.9 mills and fund the new year at $30,995,127.

While this amount represents a 6.75 percent increase over last year's $29,035,619, the difference will be made up with $741,002 from the existing fund balance.

The district will end the 2004-05 year with a fund balance of $2,282,529, which is 7.9 percent the budget's total expenditures.

District policy requires a fund balance of at least 5 percent.

The increased expenditures also will be taken care of with money from a recent settlement with Masonic Village.

The district received revenue from a settlement in-lieu-of taxes with the Aleppo development.

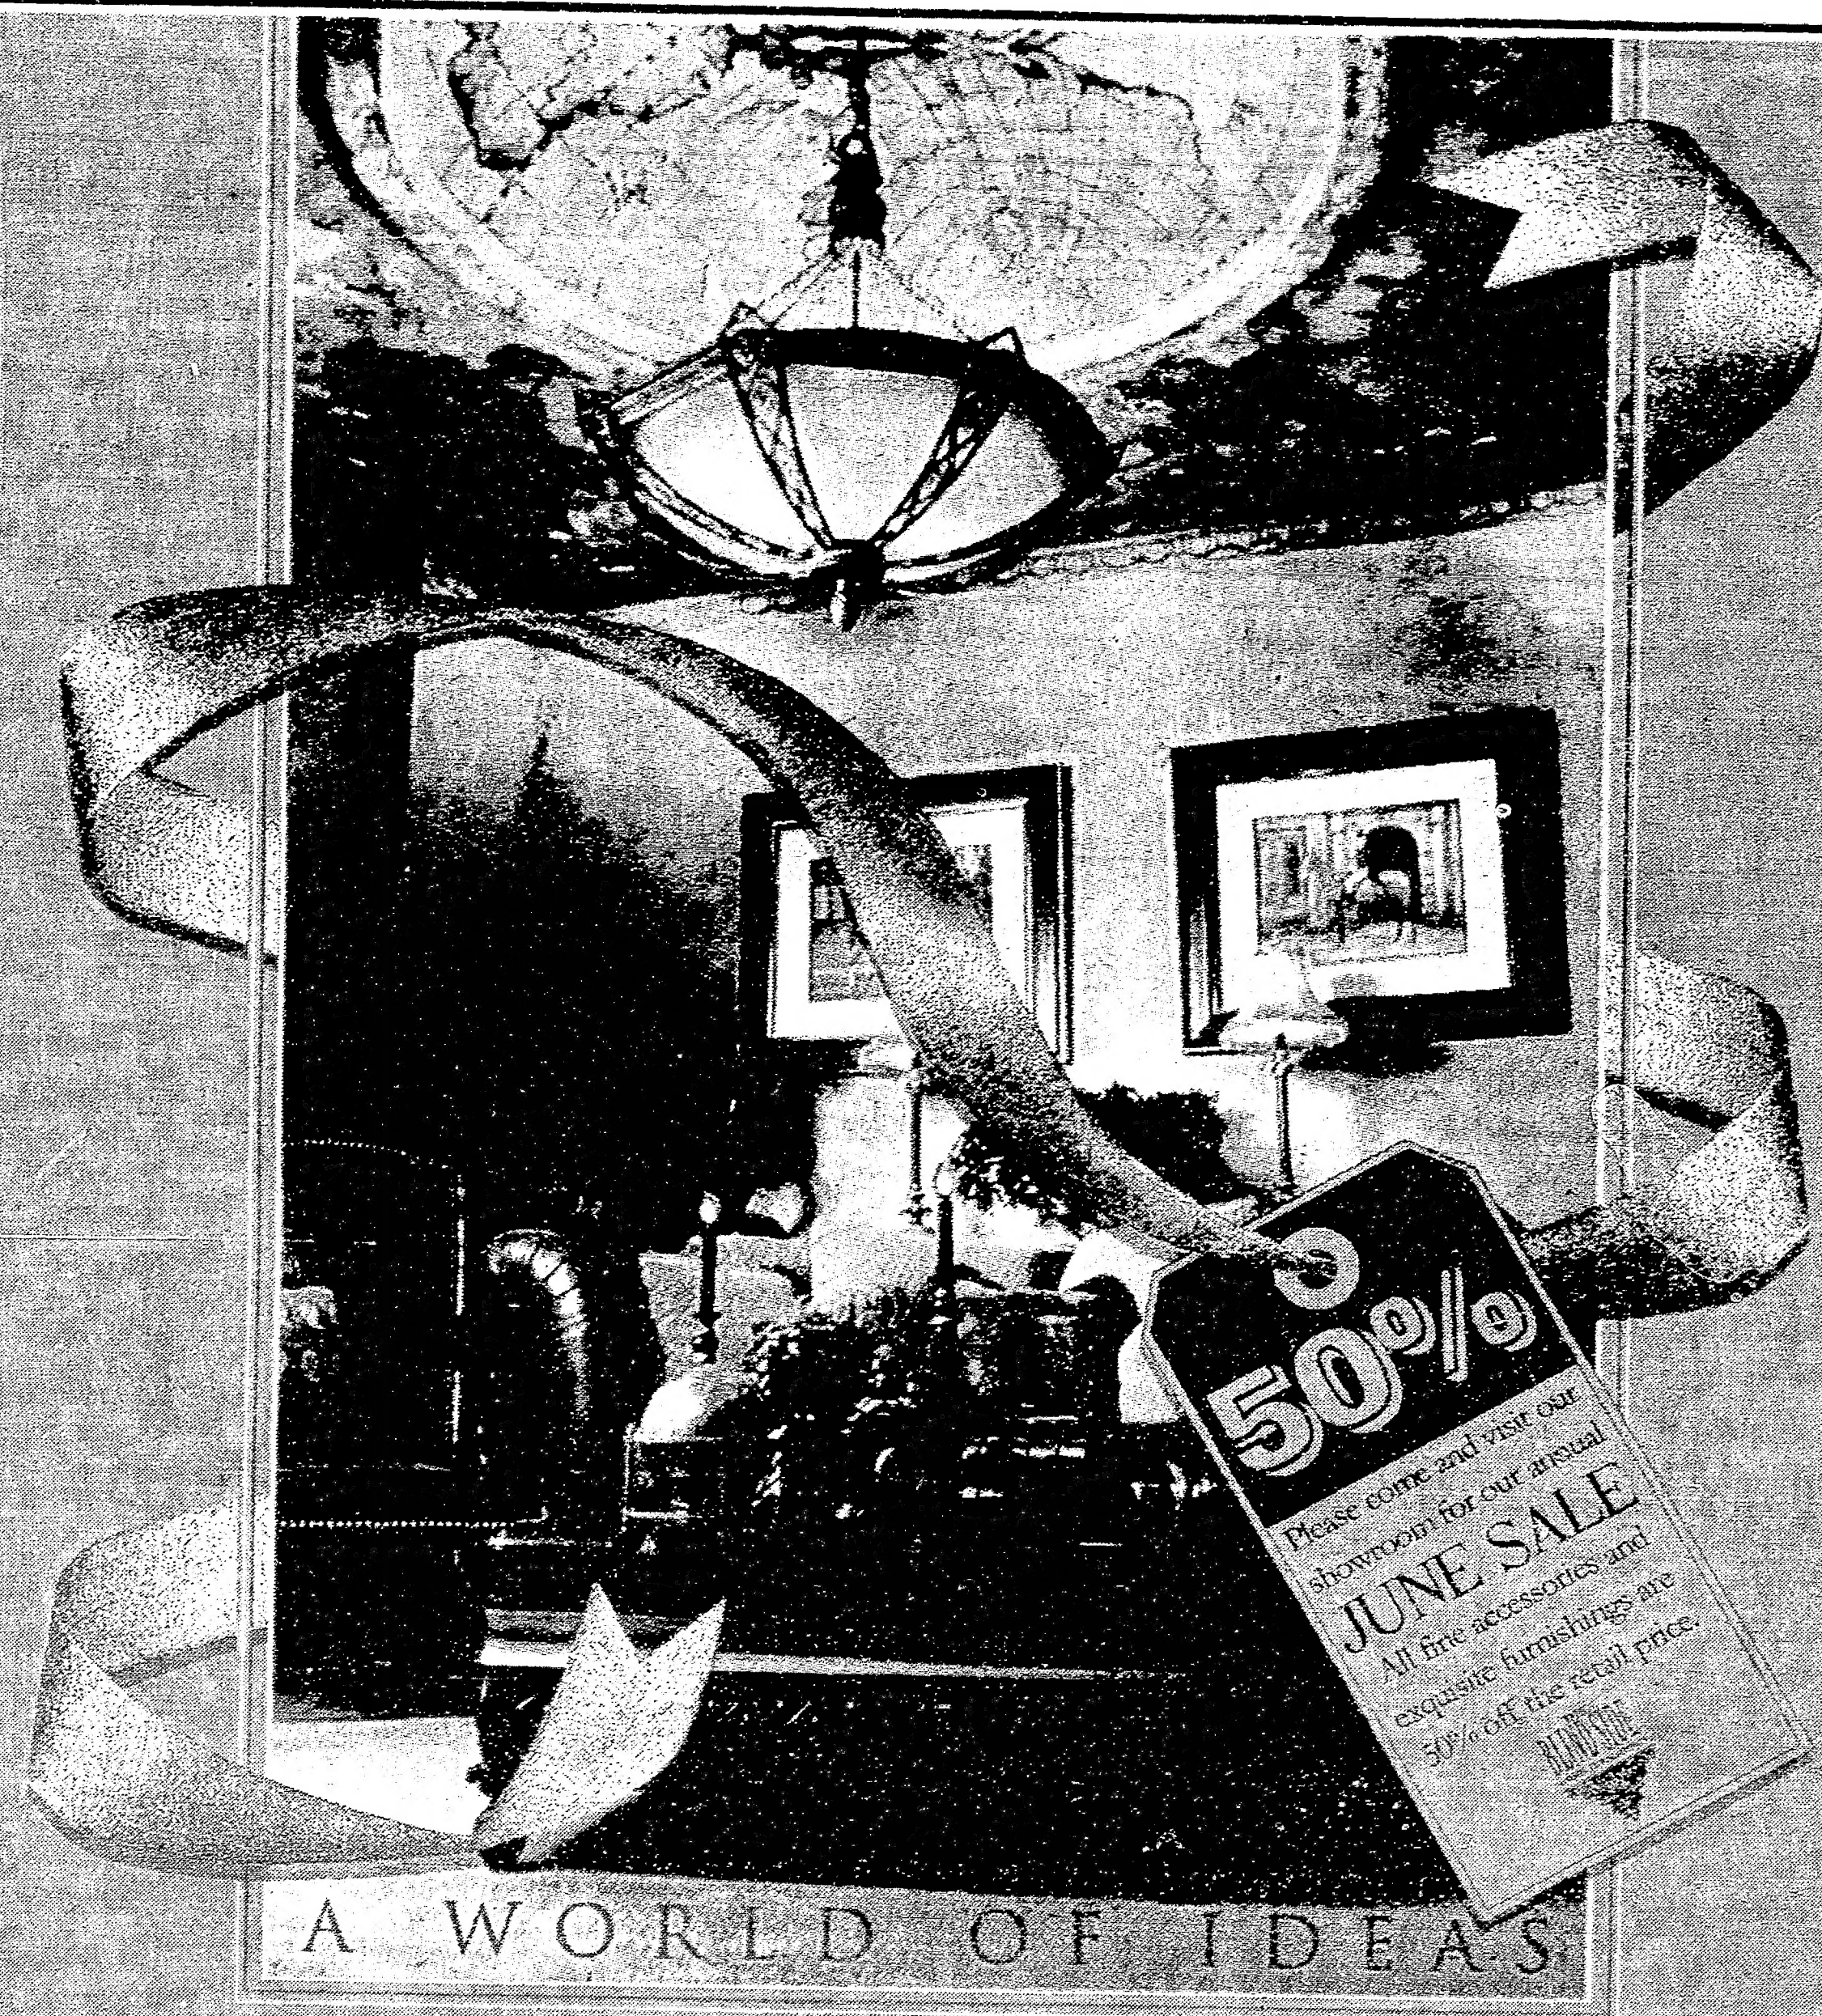

Increases in this budget come from "modest increases in the operating budget related to personnel, including the cost of health care insurance and three-year extension of the current teachers' contract," said the official release after the meeting.

An increase also is planned in annual debt service payments.

A copy of the budget is available at Sewickley Public Library, all school offices or via the Web site at www.qvssd.org.

Board rejects 'reform' idea in Act 72

QUAKER VALLEY

■ Having spent several hundred man-hours studying the supposed benefits of Act 72 to local taxpayers (and approximately $25,000 for time, mailers and consulting fees), the board voted a resounding no to what it might offer.

They had found Quaker Valley's portion of the gambling proceeds would be small, affording homeowners just a few hundred dollars tax relief, while charging renters through an increased income tax and obligating the district to added expense in the implementation of the act itself.

Rather than tax reform, they saw the legislation as "tax shifting."

"I'd give this piece of legislation an 'F'," said David Ciesinski, who chaired the ad hoc committee created to study Act 72. "Rather than deal with tax reduction, they (the legislators) got too cute."

The act, as they had found, had different implications to different districts across the state, all tied to gaming revenue sometime in 2008 or 2009.

"This was not a win for our students or members of our community," Ciesinski said. A formal resolution, which the board will send to Gov. Ed Rendell, Pennsylvania Department of Education Secretary Barnes, Sen. John Pippy and Reps. Mark Mustio and Sean Ramaley, listed each point of the board's frustrations and findings of Act 72 compliance.

Other members of the board went on the record with their comments about how "Act 72 does not achieve homeowner tax relief in a simple and positive way."

For the first time, board member Tom Patton looked at his constituency in his Sewickley district and the greater school board's work of providing education and asked: Whom am I representing here?

"I didn't like that," he said. Marianne Wagner described the act as a justification for gambling.

"This is not about tax reduction," she said, citing the governor's politicking through the state, hoping to be re-elected because of property tax reform.

"If the gambling legislation (Act 71) is thrown out of the courts, what happens to the districts?" she asked.

"I am ashamed today to call myself a Democrat," said Gianni Floro, head of the Democratic Party in the Quaker Valley.

"This is a flawed piece of legislation. It creates class warfare."

The Rev. Nancy Chalfant-Walker had taken a hard look at the minimal average tax reduction of $138.

"Knowing we're careful budgeters, it's best to stay and hope for something real — and fair reform," she said.

If the majority of state school districts reject Act 72, the board is hoping legislators get the message to design new property tax reform.

To that end, the board is asking residents to contact their senators and representatives to find ways to ensure proper and equitable funding of schools.

Quaker Valley students study rivers' ecosystems

ically for fifth through eighth graders delves into the basics of ecology, outlining the watershed principle and giving the children an idea of how the waters are affected by everyday modern life.

"No matter where you are, you are in a watershed," cautioned Lead Instructor Susie Bromfield, one of only two full-time "Voyager" educational staffers.

Bromfield explained that nearly everything "ends up in a local body of water", and that it is important to realize that potential.

How important?
According to Bromfield, the area where the Mississippi River enters the Gulf of Mexico is called the "dead zone."

"It's so polluted, not much can live there," she said.

And it continually grows, or more accurately, prohibits other living organisms from growing.

"All of our trash can travel that pathway," she warned, "along with trash from 14 other states."

Bromfield asked the students to come up with their own hypotheses regarding the cleanliness of the city's rivers.

Most agreed the waters were generally clean enough, but could be better.

Then they set out to test their hypotheses by collecting samples of water and organisms and studying them on board during a three-hour session.

They tested the rivers for pH and dissolved oxygen levels, temperature and turbidity, all means by which one can determine the integrity of the rivers' ecosystems.

One group of students gathered on deck and began trolling for plankton, or micro-invertebrates, with a plankton tow, which looks like a mesh funnel.

There are two types of plankton, phytoplankton and zooplankton, Bromfield explained. The phytoplankton live near the surface because they need sunlight to grow. They are considered "producers" because they are self-sufficient.

The zooplanktons, or "consumers," live near the surface as well; they feed on the phytoplankton.

After collecting plankton, the crew filed down to the laboratory.

Complete with microscopes and informational sheets the students used to identify different types of plankton, the lab enabled them to determine which types of organisms were thriving that day.

Of particular interest to the students was a televised (the instructor's microscope was connected to a television) viewing of a diatoms (zooplankton) feeding on what appeared to be some sort of leafy foliage. They also found plenty of phytoplankton, including closterium, asterionella, fragillaria and others, one tell-tale sign that the river is generally healthy.

The students returned to the deck to learn about the next level of the food chain, macro-invertebrates. These are insects with three body parts and six legs, Talsma explained, noting that "they may be spineless, but they've got guts ..."

They used a ponar, which is basically a small excavator on a rope and pulley, to retrieve sediment samples from the river's bottom.

The sediment was put through a filter, and the students took the remainder inside to another lab. They searched with special tools beneath bright lights for the elusive organisms.

This type of hands-on learning, according to QV Teacher Shirley Benedict, is essential.

"It helps immensely," she said. "It brings to life a lot of what they are actually studying. It's reality; they are not talking about it. They are actually testing it."

The school has a contract with and 1,295 students have benefitted.

As a member school, QV receives perks, like a "captain's chest" full of equipment including chemistry kits used to prepare the students for the actual voyage.

"They get the kind of interaction you can't match with a movie or a book," Thomas explained. "It optimizes their experience. It's about children taking ownership of education into their own hands."

And it appears to work.

Benedict said one student who seemed to lag behind in the classroom caught on when she participated in the "Voyager" program.

"All of the sudden, it was obvious that she did pick it up," Benedict said.

"That's the difference between reading about something and doing it, too."

As the "Voyager" made its way from Brunot's Island toward the Allegheny and Monongahela rivers, the students prepared for their final lesson.

To test pH and dissolved oxygen levels and temperature, they took water samples using a kemmerer. They used a secchi disk to test the river's turbidity.

The disk is attached to a long knotted rope that is lowered into the water until the disk disappears.

The knots are spaced at contiguous intervals, and the students took several readings from them and determined an average.

The class determined the pH level was 7.5, in the "green zone." The dissolved oxygen reading was approximately 11 parts per million, ample oxygen for everything to breathe, according to Instructor Stephanie Skinner-Hinton, and the turbidity was recorded at 11 decimeters, just over questionable.

"Overall, a thumbs up?" Hinton asked the class. They stuck their thumbs into the air.

"I never knew what was living in the waters," said Claire Jones. "We need to take better care of the water and don't throw stuff away and recycle."

Jones reiterated what Bromfield stressed at the beginning of the afternoon.

"Doing small things can make a big difference," she said.

Fellow classmates Joe Stark and Lex Gibb agreed the voyage beat an afternoon in the classroom.

"I learned a lot," Starke said. "I liked looking at the plankton in a microscope. I liked the chemistry stuff."

One student was awed by the vastness of the invertebrate world.

"I never knew there could be so many different kinds of plankton," said Weismantle, whose favorite subject is still science — despite the curious advent of anal gills.

Tax reform remedy shifts back to state

These are, to say the very least, unsettling times for property owners in Allegheny County.

On one hand they have been waiting for school districts to make up their minds about whether to opt into the state's Act 72 property tax reform plan, which in theory would use revenue from slot machines to reduce property taxes.

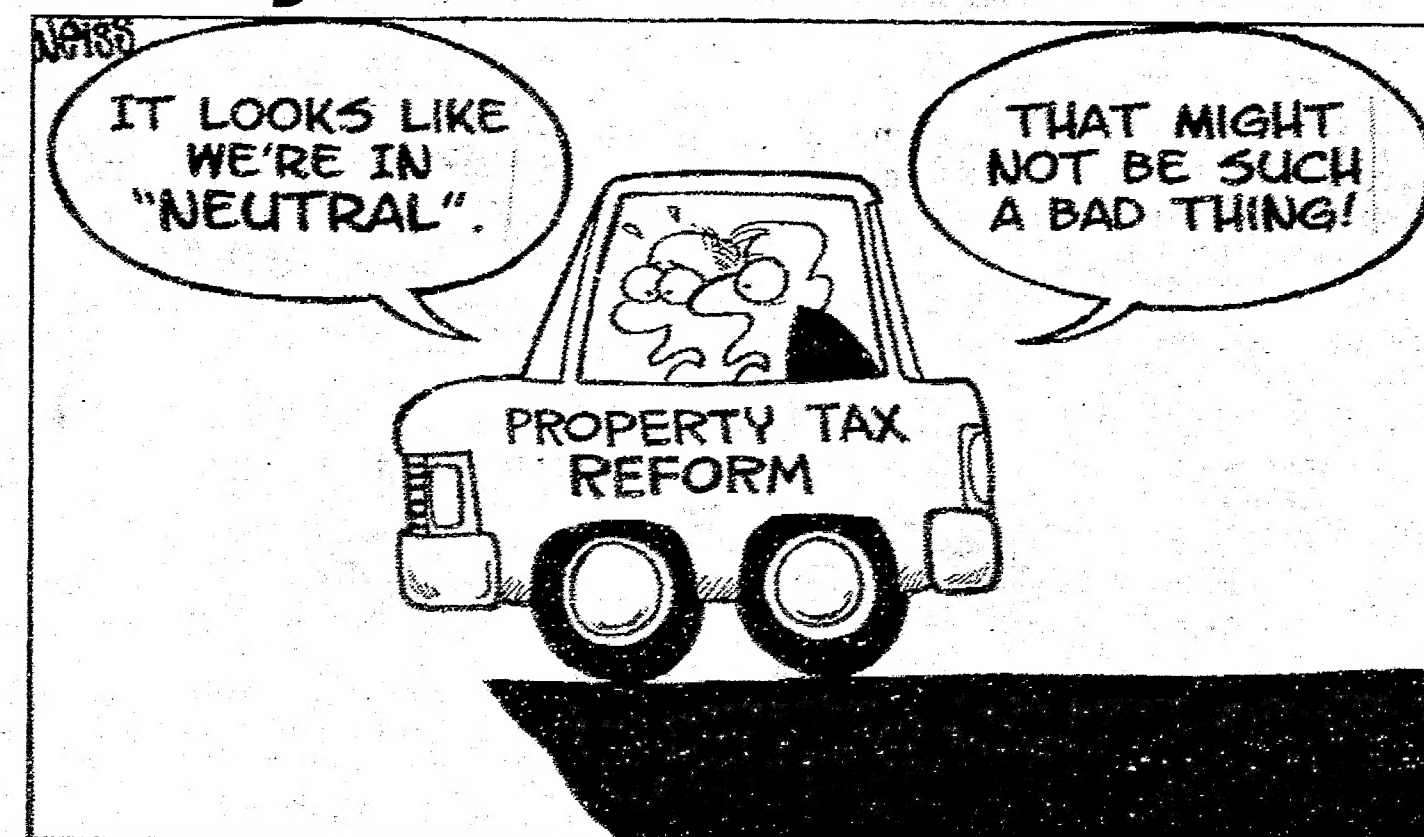

Deadline for districts to make a decision was yesterday (Tuesday), and most put it until the very last minute.

Last week, Quaker Valley's School Board voted unanimously to opt out of the plan. The decision followed an ad hoc committee's recommendation to refuse the state's idea of tax relief after months of study, information gathering and public input. The decision was difficult but ultimately based on the fact that Act 72 is inequitable, allowing reduction for some but increasing taxes for all wage earners.

While deliberations were going on in all 501 districts across the state, our county's troubled property reassessment process remains bogged down in a morass of legal arguments and political maneuvering. All of which leaves taxpayers in a confused and somewhat vulnerable position.

Legislation introduced last week by state Sen. John Pippy and Rep. Mark Mustio could help ease their concerns, at least a little bit, by protecting them against sudden and extreme tax increases in the wake of reassessments.

The measure would require school districts to, after the reassessment process, establish millage rates that are "revenue neutral" compared to the previous year.

That means if property assessments in a district rise substantially, the millage rate would have to be lowered accordingly, instead of allowing the district to reap a huge financial windfall.

A similar stipulation in the existing County Code limits districts to a five-percent revenue increase in the wake of reassessments, but that limit is poorly monitored and enforced.

This legislation should not in any way be seen as an answer to the ongoing property tax problems in the county and across the state.

That answer, in fact, may not come until an entirely new way of funding our school districts can be found.

An existing proposal to eliminate property taxes in favor of a lower but expanded state sales tax shows promise, but remains a long way from becoming reality.

QV's board asks that residents send a message to state legislators to work for real tax reform in light of Act 72's failure.

In the meantime, Pippy and Mustio's bill would at least give property owners — especially those who are elderly or on a fixed income — a little peace of mind.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Rose remembered for borough service

Dear Editor:

The election results of the balloting held on May 17 showed that Evans Rose Jr. would lose his seat on the Sewickley Heights Borough Council come the first of the year.

With his departure goes 41 years of service to the community he loves and has spent a lifetime protecting its values.

Working beside the late G. Whitney Snyder, Evans spearheaded a fund drive to purchase land within the borough that was destined to become a central school campus for the Quaker Valley School District.

This land became the nucleus for Sewickley Heights Park. Years later, Ev and Whitney were instrumental in acquiring 300 additional acres for the park system, bringing the total to almost 1,000 acres.

The park, open to the public, provides an opportunity for hundreds of people a day to enjoy nature.

It was the foresight of Evans that protected the 5-acre minimum zoning restriction with individual land covenants designed to shield the borough residents from broad legal challenges to the zoning ordinance. His tireless work has resulted in almost 100 percent of the landowners participating in the program.

Skilfully, he has held the line on taxes, while at the same time providing the residents of the Heights excellent services with limited intrusion of government.

In January when Evans leaves his position as president of council, it will be with the realization that he has served the borough well, and his knowledge of the history of the borough and his love for the community will be missed.

The lifestyle that the residents of the Heights cherish and enjoy is the result of decades of work by Evans Rose Jr.

His departure marks the end of an era.

mayor of Sewickley Heights and resident

STUDENT LETTERS

More letters focus on Holocaust horrors

Eighth graders at Quaker Valley Middle School finished up the school year with a special project on the Holocaust.

They studied the horrors of this early 20th century event and then tied that information to news from around the world.

They also made the connection between bullying, prejudice and tyrants throughout history.

Here are some of the letters that arrived at our Greentree Road office after the Days of Remembrance for Holocaust Victims had passed.

Read what the students are thinking about our present and our future.

Dear Editor:

I believe that we, as a nation, need to make sure something like the Holocaust never happens again.

We all must remember the Jews, gypsies, mentally and physically handicapped people, and all others who had to strive to survive through such hardships during the Holocaust.

We owe it to the world to prevent another Holocaust.

We are in no way different from those who suffered during the Holocaust. We are ordinary people with friends, families and jobs.

Now what can we do to help? Everyone should be aware of bullying and how it is similar, in certain aspects, to the Holocaust.

Bullying is picking on individuals or groups of people for being different.

This is exactly what the Nazis did to the Jews, picked on them because they had different beliefs and customs.

We should all take the time to talk with our friends and family about what really went on during the Holocaust and eliminate anything that relates to, or resembles, behaviors from the Holocaust.

We must all remember the Holocaust.

Bailee R. Fuller

Dear Editor:

Throughout the Week of Remembrance, we must remember the millions of people who were killed and tortured, as well as the ones that lived, scarred for life with horrible memories.

We all need to remember the Holocaust because of the people who survived it.

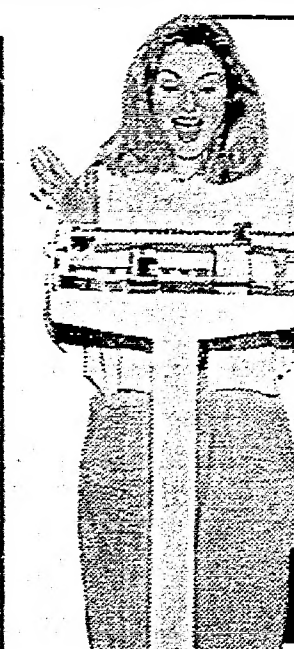

We have to remember to make our future and people all over the world's futures secure.

There are still people around the world who believe in Hitler's ideals, and what they did to people just because they were different. These people are called Neo-Nazis.

We have to protect the world from what happened in the past.

I am not asking you to forget, but rather asking you to remember and stand up for what is right no matter what.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

Students record thoughts on history

Dear Editor:

May 1-8 was designated as Days of Remembrance for the Holocaust, we must question ourselves, "Are we really remembering the Holocaust in the proper way?"

As a 14 year-old eighth-grade student from Sewickley, people might ask how much I could comprehend about the Holocaust.

But I understand a lot. I have been studying the Holocaust, so I've met survivors and heard their stories.

After doing so, I've realized that in order to finally give proper respect to those who perished and suffered during the Holocaust, we need to, as a community and as a nation, make sure nothing like that ever happens again.

The sad truth is that prejudice goes on every day. Sometimes prejudice goes on down the street or in school.

I've seen it happen — when a teenager makes fun of a mentally challenged classmate, he or she is acting out on feelings of prejudice.

Sometimes it happens a-round the world, like with the mass genocide in Rwanda or Sudan.

And it must stop today. If everyone learned the lessons my class did, lessons about respect and acceptance of others, I'm sure everyone would change radically.

Along with respect, compassion, kindness, knowledge, truth, justice and, most of all, courage, we can change the world for the better.

We must stop prejudices.

If we don't today, then when?

Emily M. Pusateri

Dear Editor:

During the Days of Remembrance for the Holocaust, May 1-8, we must be reminded of the terrible evil that killed millions of innocent people. T

These men, women and even children were all part of this genocide simply because of their beliefs.

The genocide sprang from an illogical idea that blond-haired, blue-eyed people should be the dominant race.

We need to picture ourselves in the shoes of victims, and know how brave they must have been to endure such persecution.

Now we must decide what we will do as a community to help make sure such discrimination ence.

When we see bullying going on in school, we should actually interfere with the bullying and try and stop it.

If we see signs of prejudice, make a complaint about it. If you see an inappropriate sign, rip it down.

If we know someone who has an issue with another person because of the way they look or what they believe, we should talk to them. Help them see the wrong in what they are doing.

To remember the Holocaust and to prevent it from happening again, we need to research the subject and get involved in keeping our community peaceful.

Days of Remembrance spark thought, letters

Dear Editor:

During the Days of Remembrance for the Holocaust, we must remember all of the men, women, children and families who died or survived the Holocaust, people who were tortured to death or found a way to get out of all the horrid things.

We should remember the Holocaust because Europe experienced the horror for eight years. We should remember it also because in today's world, things relate to the Holocaust.

In my school, I see kids making fun of and being mean to each other for the color of their skin or religion, and we need that to stop. If it gets so out of hand, the kid being bullied could start something as horrible as the Holocaust.

In the War in Iraq, prisoners of war were being abused by United States soldiers.

On April 20, 1999, a sophomore student shot fellow students and teachers in a high school in Colorado. He shot them because people were bullying him.

The Holocaust may be over, but the discrimination and persecution of the Holocaust is still a part of the Holocaust today.

What should everyone do to remember the Holocaust and make sure it never happens again? The answer is simple.

Follow the golden rule: "Treat others how you would want to be treated."

Jessica S. Gross

Dear Editor:

During the Days of Remembrance for the Holocaust, we have to remember that it was an insult to humanity; we must never let something like it happen again.

We must remember all the Jews, gypsies, mentally handicapped and others who endured pain, loss and the death of their loved ones during the time of the Holocaust.

As an eighth grade student at Quaker Valley, my peers and I have taken the time to remember all the innocent people who were killed or put through agonizing pain because they believed in something.

I have always been taught to fight for what I believe in, and for people to be killed because of a certain belief they might have goes against everything I have ever been taught.

Now during the Days of Remembrance, we must educate the world on what's happened.

We need to be aware that something like the Holocaust has occurred at once, so let's not let it happen again.

So many innocent lives were lost.

What if they had lived? One of those people could have made a major discovery that could have changed the world. I guess we will never know now.

There is nothing we can do today that can change what happened yesterday, but what we do today can change what happens tomorrow.

So I'm asking you just to remember, so that it doesn't happen again.

Shayne H. Harris

Dear Editor:

Holocaust? There is still a ringing question in the ears of some who say it never happened.

As I was researching the Holocaust, I was amazed at the amount of written material addressing these atrocities.

The Holocaust was not just a single-day event; it went on for 13 years.

There is just too much documentation for this not to be true. Too many people were tortured and murdered at the hands of one man and his followers, a man whose only dream was to control the world and establish a perfect Aryan race.

Adolf Hitler hoped to achieve this by annihilating the Jewish people.

We should never forget the Holocaust. It is imperative that we be alert for early signs of oral or written pronouncements of extreme bias or hatred by an individual or organization.

The ascendance to power is gradual and, like cancer, if left untreated enters the fabric of society, destroying the good and leaving the evil to dominate.

It is very important that the Holocaust never be forgotten.

Overpass plans up for PennDOT review

By Laura Halleman
 Staff writer

The final plans for the Leetsdale Ferry Street overpass project are in for review with PennDOT, and the project is expected to go out for bid in the summer.

The project will include a new bridge span to be built between Ferry Street and the Oliver Bridge.

The new span will be constructed over Route 65 and connect with First Street.

LEETSDALE

Dan Bugundy, of PBS & J TriLine Associates, a consulting company out of Canonsburg, said the project would also include the widening of Route 65 to allow for a turning lane for southbound traffic and also the widening of Broad Street near the new overpass.

There also will be a new road constructed leading to the Leetsdale Industrial Park which Burgundy said will be named Brickworks Drive.

The Leetsdale Municipal Authority and Edgeworth Municipal Authority are in the midst of preparation of agreements regarding the relocation of water and sewer lines for the advancement of the Ferry Street overpass project.

Burgundy said construction is slated to begin in October and the project could take up to two years to complete.

COURT REPORT

Doctor faces sexual assault charges

By Laura Halleman
 Staff writer

A Sewickley eye doctor will face trial in Allegheny County Court on charges he allegedly sexually assaulted two young boys in their Moon Township home between 1994 and 1999.

Dr. Kevin D. Clark, 41, of Wexford, was arrested by Moon Township police on March 15, 2005, and charged with two counts of attempted involuntary deviate sexual intercourse and one count of unlawful restraint.

At a preliminary hearing, Coraopolis District Judge Mary Murray dismissed four counts of aggravated indecent assault and two counts of attempted deviate sexual intercourse.

Clark, who practices with Ophthalmology Associates in Sewickley and Moon Township, was charged by Moon Township police when an Allegheny County CYF case worker brought the case to their attention in October 2004.

Detectives sat in on forensic interviews with the alleged victims who accused Clark of sexual assaulting them with a broomstick on separate occasions over a five-year period.

The two juveniles involved are now 13 and 17 years of age.

A criminal records check by detectives showed that Clark was also arrested in 1985 for indecent exposure.

Clark's attorney, Robert Stewart, did not return phone calls to the Sewickley Herald.

QV commentary, one last time

By Anna Lee
 Student columnist

Taco Salad Tuesdays and Pasta Thursdays, after years of cafeteria food, I have finally found lunches I like just as I'm leaving.

Each day of high school was filled from morning until night. It is now that I can see what I will and won't miss.

I won't miss lugging my biology book, math book and English binder up and down the parking lot hill everyday.

In fact, I won't miss the parking lot hill at all. Winter or summer, morning or afternoon, that hill strained my legs and the taut straps of my bulging backpack.

Happily, I am now set free from seemingly endless assemblies and ceremonies. I take pride in saying I will never again sit in the lunch room waiting for the 7:45 bell. "Good-bye," I call to AP tests and finals - at least until September when college rolls around.

I will miss my nine-minute sleep alarm and the bell at 3 p.m. that respectively delay and release me from school each day. Though, part of my enjoyment comes from what each is allowing me to avoid each day: more school.

If my alarm clock starts blaring Billy Ray Cyrus every morning at 6:15 this summer, I will be less enthusiastic about it.

Unexpectedly, apparently insignificant things are cropping up. I miss the anticipation of 2:55. With the whole day open, there is freedom but no anticipation for walking out into the afternoon sunshine.

After the cries of "we're graduating" and the concussion from a flying tassel and cap finally register, I'll get a little teary eyed. Not because of the lunches and school bells I'll be missing, but because of the people.

Each day seems like the final chance to say goodbye, reminisce, and take candid photos.

No wonder each day as I'm running out the door, I dash back up the stairs to grab my camera.

WHAT'S HAPPENING

July 4 holiday events unlikely

By Laura Halleman

Staff writer

What has been a time honored family tradition in the borough of Leetsdale for the last 50 years is nearing its end.

Due to lack of money and volunteers to support the effort, the annual Leetsdale Fourth of July fireworks display and parade will not be held this year.

"It appears we've run out of time," said Robert George, a Leetsdale resident who, along with a handful of others, have tried to keep the event on track but to no avail thus far.

The event, which is enjoyed by 12,000 people each year, was typically planned and organized by the now disbanded Leetsdale Community Activities Association (LCAA).

Last month, with no other volunteers but John Kaefter, Lynn Kohlmeier and Janet Daugherty left on the LCAA and no funds, the LCAA had no choice but to disband.

George and others have tried to pick up where the group left off, but with attendance at their last meeting at only five people, the odds of pulling off such a highly popular event do not look good.

The former LCAA was also a non-profit organization and was able to incur the entire cost of the festivities through private money, donations and fund-raising events.

"I think right now one of the stumbling blocks is finding an accountant to donate time," said George.

"We are in the process of trying to find an individual who can help us become a non-profit organization. But at this point, in all likelihood, there will be no parade and no fireworks."

Although Zambelli fireworks was willing to work with the group and extend its deadline for payment of the fireworks, the cost is far from what has been collected thus far.

"Leetsdale was one of their first customers and they said they would work with us, but it doesn't look like we can raise the money in time," said George.

Currently, the group of volunteers has a $2,000 commitment from a local company; however, cost of the fireworks display is $15,000 and the parade runs at a cost of roughly $3,500.

With little manpower and money, July 4th in Leetsdale will be a quiet one.

SPOTLIGHT

SVH Auxiliary set to celebrate its 100th

By Laura Halleman

Staff writer

It all began with a group of women intent upon helping in any way possible to get the Sewickley Valley Hospital off the ground, literally.

In 1905, Mrs. Henry W. Oliver, who served as the first president of the auxiliary donated four acres of land on which to build the hospital. That same year a group of Sewickley women gathered at the home of Mrs. A.B. Starr.

From that first meeting, the auxiliary of Sewickley Valley Hospital was created, and the organization has worked tirelessly to provide equipment and volunteer hours to ensure quality patient care and success of the hospital.

In the early years of the auxiliary, fund-raising activities focused on country fairs, one in particular on Aug. 10, 1905. Admission was only 50 cents and dinner was a mere 10 cents. Children were treated to pony rides, homemade ice cream while a band played.

The efforts of the auxiliary brought in $5,000. With that, the hospital opened in 1907 with 14 beds and two bassinets. That was only the beginning of what has become one of the most influential fund-raising organizations for the hospital.

Annual reports from the 1920s show that auxiliary volunteers hemmed towels, collected linens for the maternity ward including sheets, pillow cases and blankets, and even provided homegrown tomatoes that were put into jars for use at the hospital.

In 1936, the decision was made to use any funds raised by the auxiliary to purchase special equipment needed for the hospital. Items too numerous to mention were purchased through the efforts of the women of the auxiliary.

A Pinky Puppet project was a success in 1961. The auxiliary provided a hand puppet for every child admitted to the hospital, brightening their stay and putting a smile on the child's face where there may not have been one before. The puppets were handmade from the same material the volunteer uniforms were made of in those days.

In 1960, the auxiliary sponsored its first fashion show that has now become an annual event. One fashion show, "Flairs for Fall" featured designer Vera Maxwell's collection. She flew in personally to help with the show.

Mrs. William Fowler and Mrs. George Powell chaired the show in 1968 and proceeds raised went to the Coronary Care Unit of the hospital.

While some fund-raising ideas have fallen by the wayside, new ones have taken their place with many new volunteers.

But some auxiliary members have been contributing many volunteer hours over the past years. Mary Jane Williams has been with the auxiliary for 50 years. She is credited with beginning the auxiliary newsletter that keeps the public abreast of hospital events.

"I've worked in everything from the hospitality shop to the nursing office to the foundation office," she said.

Dotty Price, past president of the auxiliary, has been a member for 10 years.

Charlotte Bober, current president of the auxiliary, said she "tells the women what functions are coming up and fits each person's specific talents with an event."

Some of the more recent fund-raisers that the auxiliary has held include a "No Bake/Bake Sale".

"This is a great idea for those who don't have time to bake anything. Instead, we send out post cards to people and instead of putting all that trouble into time and ingredients, they can simply write a check," said Price.

Bober said this is one of their more popular fund-raisers.

In honor of their 100th anniversary, the auxiliary has compiled a cookbook titled, "A Century of Serving." It includes a collection of appetizers and dessert recipes from women of the auxiliary and staff at the hospital. The cookbook is $12 and is available at the Sewickley Valley Hospital and the Sewickley Library.

To celebrate its centennial, the auxiliary is hosting an evening of "friendship, fun, dinner and dancing" at the Edgeworth Club on Saturday, June 25.

The event is black tie and all former auxiliary presidents will be honored.

"If someone did not receive an invitation for the event or if you know someone who should have received an invitation, please contact us," said Irene Dailey, volunteer services coordinator at Sewickley Valley Hospital.

Dailey also asks that anyone who has past historical pieces to donate from the hospital or auxiliary to contact her at 412-749-7052 so they may be included in the historical display at the dinner.

ANNIVERSARY PLAY

Watson celebrates quarter century

By Jon Paul Creese

Staff writer

The golf outing was started by William Millar, this year's honorary chairman, and the late Jerry Bush in 1981. A quarter century later, the event has generated more than $2.6 million for the special needs school.

"Bill Millar asked me to get involved as a committee volunteer to help put on the fund raiser," said this year's vice-chairman, Bill Wrenshaw, who's been with the Pro-Am since 1992.

"I stayed with it because I like the mission of The Watson Institute to help autistic children."

The Pro-Am involves teams of four amateur golfers accompanied by a golf pro. The event consistently raises more than $150,000 yearly.

Last year the tourney raised $163,000.

For the past few years, proceeds have gone directly to the institute's respite program that is designed to ease the burden of parents of autistic children.

"It's a wonderful program," Wrenshaw said.

"Most parents don't get any breaks. They created a program, almost like a day camp, where parents can leave their children with a trusted person in a trusted environment."

National City is the title sponsor for the second consecutive year and has been a corporate sponsor since 1997.

ALLEGHENY COUNTRY Club has served as The Watson Institute Pro-Am grounds since the tournament's inception in 1981.

Vince Delie Jr., an executive vice president of National City and Pro-Am chairman, got involved five years ago and said his attachment grows stronger every year.

"I can't walk away from that building without feeling very emotional," he said.

"The kids are awesome. They really work hard despite their challenges. It makes me want to work hard to help [raise funds]."

And it's the kids who keep him coming back.

He remembered walking up to check in for the Pro-Am a few years back and being greeted by one of the institute's students.

"He sold me a raffle ticket," Delie said. "It made me focus on what it is all about. It's about the kids.

"That's the one thing I will never forget. It was pretty moving."

Delie said he also appreciates the efforts of the other co-chairs this year, Kevin Weir and Bud Thorne.

"They work really hard to raise the money," he said.

If you are going: the 25th Anniversary National City Watson Institute Pro Am Golf Tournament will be held Friday, June 3, at the Allegheny Country Club and Sewickley Golf Club.

The event will begin with a noon shotgun start at both clubs.

Summer camp sponsors still needed

By Laura Hallemann

Staff writer

For the first time, Sweetwater Art Center and Sewickley Community Center have partnered to offer a unique, two-week summer camp that will combine art and educational experience for kids of all ethnic backgrounds and socio-economic status.

FUN WITH FRIENDS

The camp, known as the "Creative Summer Experience" will be held in June and the theme is "All About Me - Celebrating Ourselves."

"This will be a diverse crowd of kids and we want to provide every child with the same opportunity, regardless of income," said Michelle Peters, education coordinator at Sweetwater.

"We want the children to feel really good about themselves and to discover their talents and at the same time learn about community."

Peters, along with Shirley Wormsley, executive director of the Sewickley Community Center, have full days of activities planned for the kids, who range in age from six to 12.

"Each day the kids will get a different experience in performing and visual arts, as well as educational experiences in journal writing and other areas," said Peters.

The camp, which filled quickly, will include the kids separating into smaller groups and taking part in art activities such as self-portrait, sculpture, cooking and visual and performing arts at Sweetwater and computer lessons, writing, swimming and other outdoor activities at the community center.

Every child will experience every aspect of the camp, said Peters. At the end of each day, the kids will combine into one group at the community center where they will be picked up each day.

Highlights of the camp will include a drumming workshop taught by Jim Donovan of Rusted Root, a contemporary and West African dance workshop conducted by Michelle Edison and a hip hop dance workshop taught by Tandi Lane.

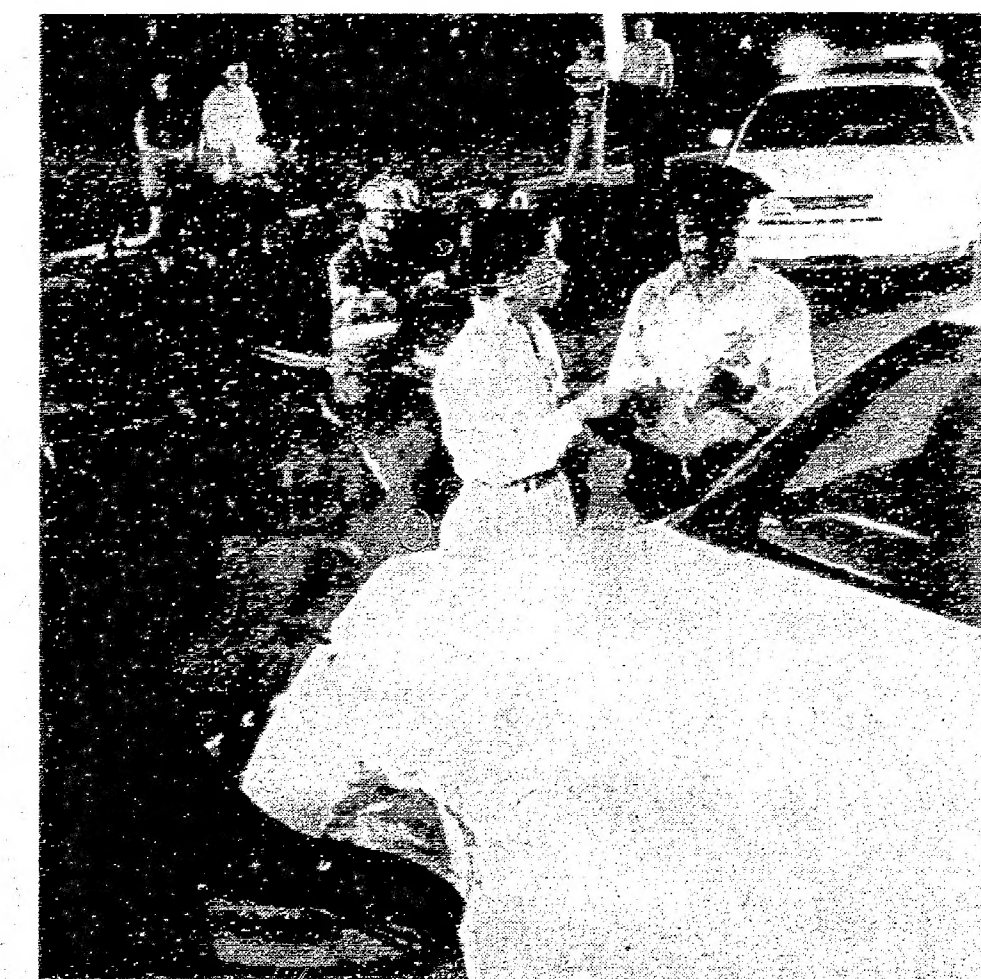

In order for kids of all economic backgrounds to take part in the summer camp, Sweetwater and the Sewickley Community Center strove to keep the cost of the camp to a minimum.

Because of this, they are in need of people who would like to sponsor a child for the camp.

Peters would like to thank Environtron Inc., Safran's Market, McCay Builders Inc. and Dollar Bank for sending donations for the camp.

If interested in sponsoring a child, call Michelle Peters at Sweetwater at 412-741-4405 or send your donation to Sweetwater Center for the Arts, 200 Broad Street, Sewickley, PA 15143-1525 and specify that it is for the "All About Me" summer camp.

Dove release marks guest day at ladies' golf outing

The Sewickley Heights Golf Club Ladies' Guest Day on Thursday, June 16, will feature a peace dove release as part of a special event titled "Around the World in 18 Holes."

Members of the club and their guests will start the day with a continental breakfast, followed by a world peace dove launch in place of a shotgun start.

White doves from the National Aviary will be released to kick off the day.

Players will carry "passports" as they make their way through the course, with each hole marked with a flag of a different country.

Teams will test their world knowledge as well as their golf skills by guessing the countries represented by each flag.

YMCA staffers learn ins and outs of Team Development Course

By Jon Paul Creese

Sports editor

It took a long stretch of the imagination, but the results were tangible.

A group of Sewickley Valley YMCA staffers were stranded at one end of the dreaded divergence. Their Humvee, about 20 feet away at the opposite end of a cavernous canyon, was out of gas. The only equipment they had were two buckets, several lengths of halved PVC pipe and their collective wit; the only structure spanning the vast drop from precipice to precipice, a set of wooden logs that grew out into a Y-shaped bridge.

So they fit the pipes together, formed a line along one half of the wooden bridge and poured the bucket of "gasoline" through the makeshift pipeline into another bucket located next to the rough-terrain vehicle. They filed across the log and hopped in.

Mission accomplished.

Off they went to the next challenge.

The "canyon" was actually only about a foot deep. There was no Humvee on the opposite end and the gasoline was really water. This scenario represented one of many team-building concepts contrived to give the Y's new Team Development Course its appeal.

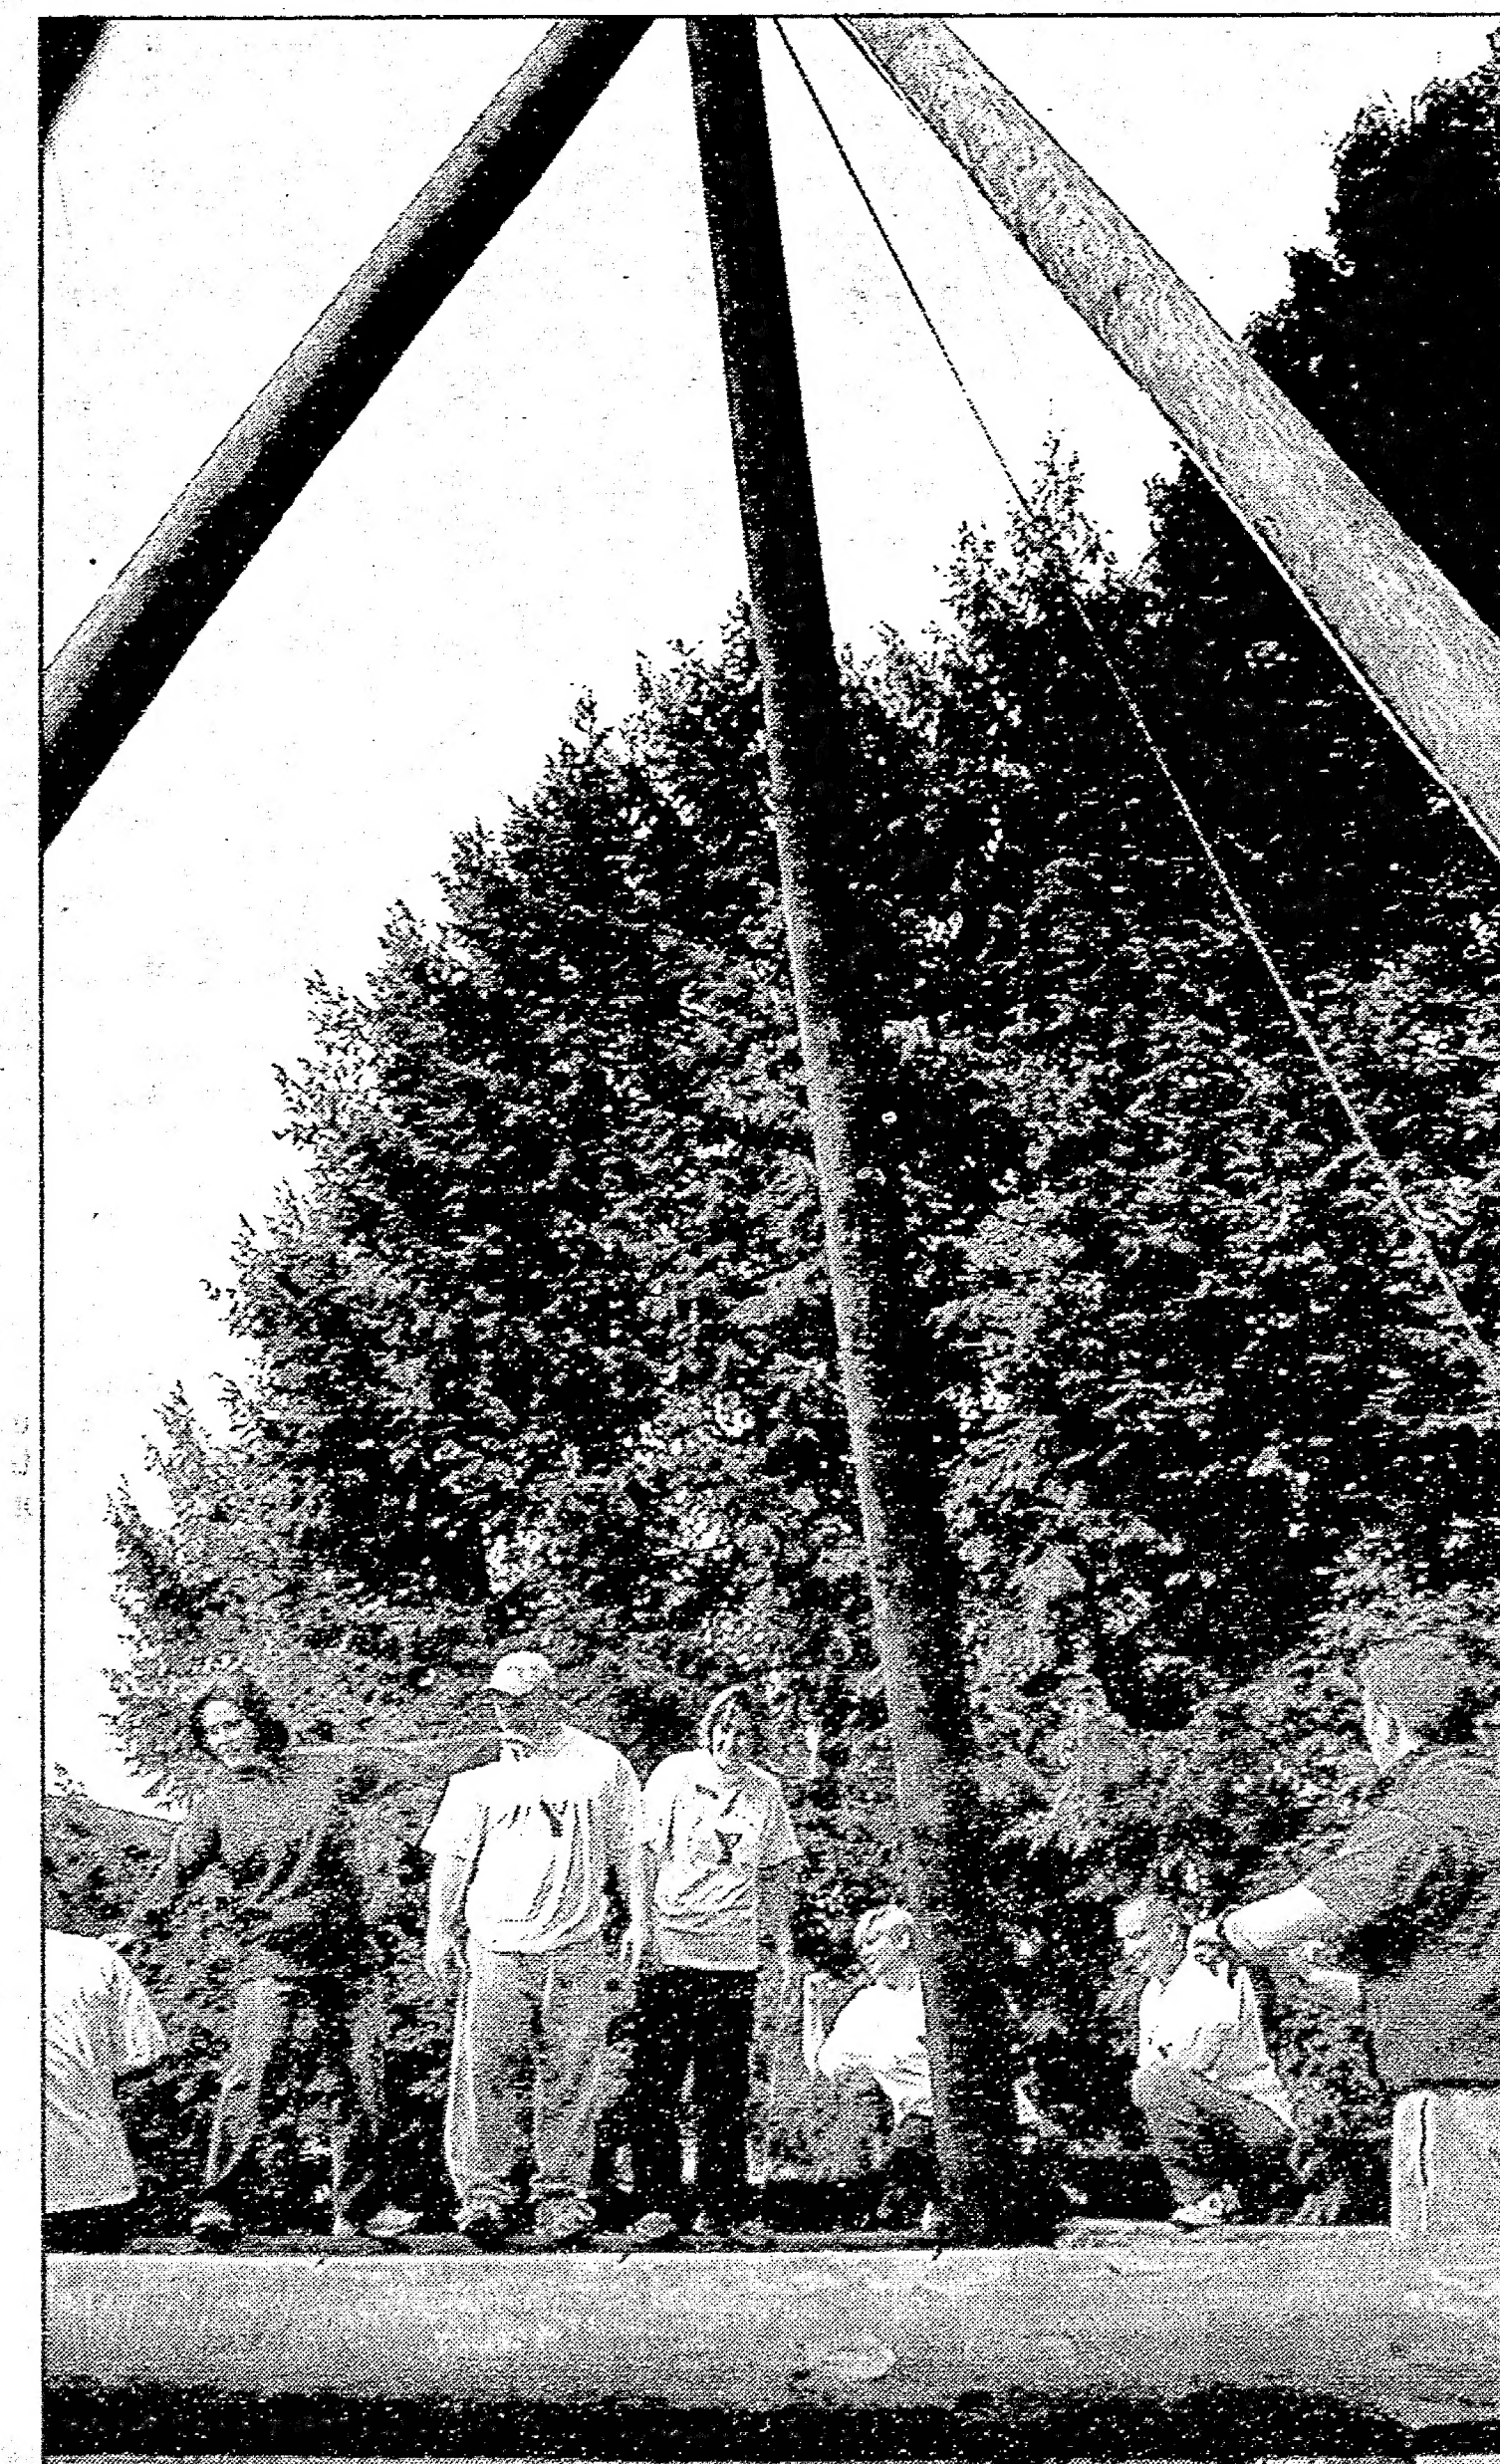

The scenarios have much the same draw that keeps folks glued to the network "Survivor" series. It's challenging, physically and mentally. It requires teamwork and often participants are faced with life or death situations.

Unlike the series though, the scenarios do not include back-biting, blackmail, revenge and other sorts of "realistic" intrigue that cable viewers tend to eat up.

This course is all about cohesion. "The gist is to build teamwork," explained Alan Ficca, youth and teen director, adding that a "challenge-by-choice" dynamic allows participants to opt out of any given competition.

Ficca, one of 11 Y staffers being trained on the course, said training began by gathering the group in a

Thought for the Week

If you were asked, "What quality distinguishes a great man from a little man pretending to be great?" - how would you answer? ... There are many reasonable answers to this question... Truthfulness, honesty, thoughtfulness are but a few.

"The instinct for revenge" also distinguishes the great men from the little men... It is the unfailing mark of the little man that he spends his hours daydreaming and plotting hot to "get even" for real and fancied injuries... Men of great stature and personality know the futility of spending time in this way.

Abe Lincoln was just such a man... completely free from bitter malice and the urge to do his political adversaries "in." Contrary to all political practice, he put his political enemies in the cabinet - Edwin Stanton, William Seward, Salmon Chase, who called Lincoln a "clown" and a "gorilla." He cared not what they thought of him, so long as they could do a good job in public service...

We are always most appreciative of any comments you might have on the articles presented here...

circle to toss a large rubber spider around while calling out each others names.

"It was a fun name game," he said. "Whether you know each other or not, you will know everyone by the end. It's about learning to grow close to one another."

Ficca said the trust-building exercise is critical for groups whose participants are not familiar with one another.

"Communication is the big deal," he stressed, pointing out that some scenarios require participants to rely completely on their teammates and trust is an absolute must.

The course is made up of six separate elements: Horrible Hologram, Great Divergence, Bermuda Triangle, Complex X and Darian Gap.

More than 40 scenarios are outlined in the manual; however, an infinite number of variations can be applied to each in order to tailor the course to a group's size, maturity level and objective, or to make it more or less challenging.

Ficca, TDC director, said the course can benefit groups of 12 to 72 people and has built in time variations for anywhere from two- to eight-hour scenarios.

He said he expects the course will attract teams from business and groups such as the military reserves because it enables teams and individuals to build skills such as leadership, listening, planning and communication.

"The facilitator (which will be a trained Y staffer) does not always give the group everything they need to solve problems," he said. "You have to think. If the group is struggling, you can throw them a board or a rope."

Scenarios include rescue operations, a "plutonium tub" challenge that involves a plastic wash tub filled with water that the team must move without actually touching the tub, and "egg-chute" challenge that involves a continually moving egg that must make it from one "island" to another, just to mention a few.

All scenarios involve low-to-the-ground operations for safety purposes and other potential hazards specific to each scenario are outlined before each.

Ficca said the course will also benefit existing Y programs such as sports camps and other activities.

"It's a perk. I can now bring them on the course," he said of groups such as "Girls on the Move," a middle-school level group he directs.

Ficca said he is ironing out the details but expects to start scheduling teams for use by members and community groups by the end of June.

For the 2005 Classic, Thompson will be placing herself on the course and playing two holes with every group participating in this year's golf event. She is also volunteering her time and talent to instruct a complimentary putting clinic for all golf participants.

The Ladies Golf Classic will take place on Monday, June 6, 2005 at Allegheny Country Club in Sewickley, PA. Activities will include golf, a putting clinic

CLIP AND SAVE.

Every month, the Greater Pittsburgh Community Food Bank helps provide food for more than 120,000 people in our region. More than 16,000 are elderly. Another 37,000 are children who can't look forward to weekends, holidays and summer, because without school lunches, there may not be enough to eat. These aren't just statistics. They're your neighbors... your friends.

Hunger is an epidemic that keeps our nation from greatness. Which is why on National Hunger Awareness Day - June 7, 2005 - communities like ours all across America unite to focus attention on the persistent problem of hunger.

Together, we can help our neighbors through the tough times and onto better ones.

Yes! I'd like to help the Food Bank feed hungry people in our region.

If you'd like to make a cash donation, please clip this coupon and send a check payable to: Greater Pittsburgh Community Food Bank, One North Linden Street, Duquesne, PA 15110.

There are many ways you can help. Fill out the coupon and make a donation. You can also donate on line at pittsburghfoodbank.org. Or consider volunteering at the Greater Pittsburgh Food Bank or your local pantry or soup kitchen by calling Ivy Ero at 412.460.3663. Think about hosting a "One Big Table Potluck" at home (www.secondharvest.org).

And from June 7 through the end of the month, when you visit your local Giant Eagle supermarket, you can make a donation at the check-out counter. When you donate $2.00 to the Food Bank, you're actually helping us provide over $10 worth of groceries.

Help us feed people today as we seek long-term solutions to the problems that caused them to be hungry in the first place. Help us make sure that misery never has the last word.

Ben Avon Heights home comes with updates galore

This impressive Colonial Revival home in Ben Avon Heights has been restored and updated throughout by the current owners.

Located just 10 minutes from downtown Pittsburgh, it is adjacent to Shannopin Country Club and overlooks the golf course.

No detail has been missed in this executive home. The interior has a wonderful circular flow that is perfect for entertaining and raising a family.

The heat/air conditioning, electrical and plumbing are included in the updates, and the house is in "move-in" condition.

There are six bedrooms, 3.5 updated baths, and 9-foot ceilings and plaster walls.

Extensive custom-woodwork is throughout the house. Nine newly added and restored solid wood French doors with beveled glass are on the first floor.

REAL ESTATE TODAY

Imagine that you're throwing a party, and want to invite only your closest friends. Rather than taking time to mail invitations, you place an announcement in the paper reading "I'm having a party Friday night, and your invited. Please come!" Your name and address appear at the bottom of the ad.

Reason To Celebrate!

Betty Moraca
ABR, CRS, CRI

After a great deal of preparation, Friday night arrives and you're surprised when over fifty total strangers show ready to party. What happened?

First, you took a short cut by running a generic ad to attract the attention of your friends. Instead, you got the attention of "John Q. Public." Second, you expended effort preparing for a party that wasn't appreciated by the crowd that showed up.

A similar situation could happen if you try to sell your home without representation. Without an agent, you may attract prospects to your home who have no business being there. They may lack the financial resources to buy, or may be bargain hunters or "window shoppers."

An agent attracts only the best prospects by targeting specific buying groups. Potential buyers are screened for their ability to make a purchase and motivation for doing so. Only qualified buyers, by appointment, are shown your home. You are more likely to receive the best possible price, with fewer showings, and with the least inconvenience to you and your family.

Betty Moraca is a sales associate for Howard Hanna Real Estate Services, 401 Broad Street, Sewickley. For answers to your questions about real estate, call Betty at 741-2200 Ext. 222. ## SEWICKLEY REAL ESTATE

DESIGN OF THE WEEK

Toliver design has townhouse appeal

In the world of duplexes, four bedroom units are rare.

The Toliver has four bedrooms, plus three bathrooms.

Family living spaces are on the ground floor; bedrooms, with two of the bathrooms are upstairs.

This two-story duplex works well as a townhouse. The plan is as economical to build as it is to maintain, and its compact footprint fits neatly on a narrow lot.

Multipaned windows give the building a cottage look.

Each of the mirror-imaged units offer nearly 1,300 square feet of living space, plus a deep one-car garage.

Living, dining and kitchen areas flow together at the rear, where glass fills much of the wall. Sliders in the dining room open onto a patio. The kitchen is enclosed on three sides, but totally open to the dining area at the rear.

Counters and cupboards are amply supplied in this step-saving floor plan. The big three—refrigerator, stove and sink—are set in a tight triangle.

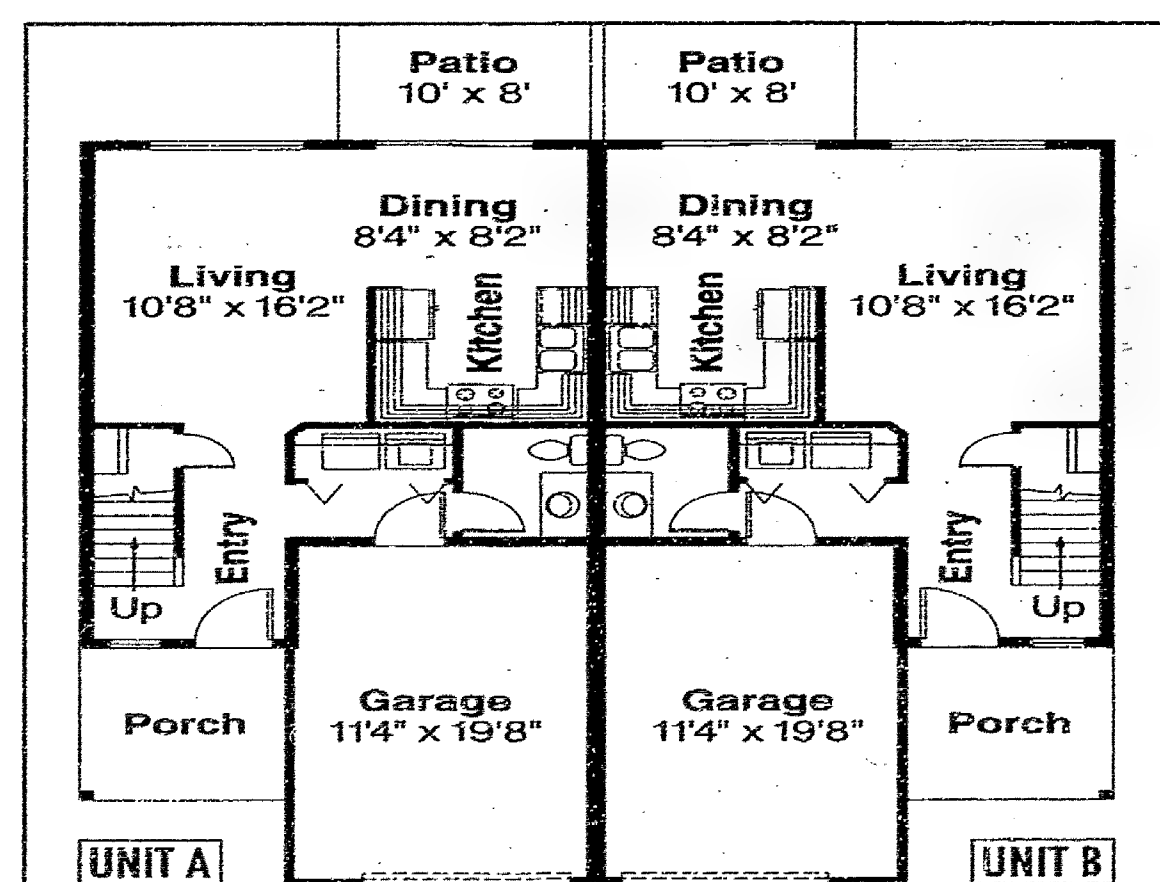

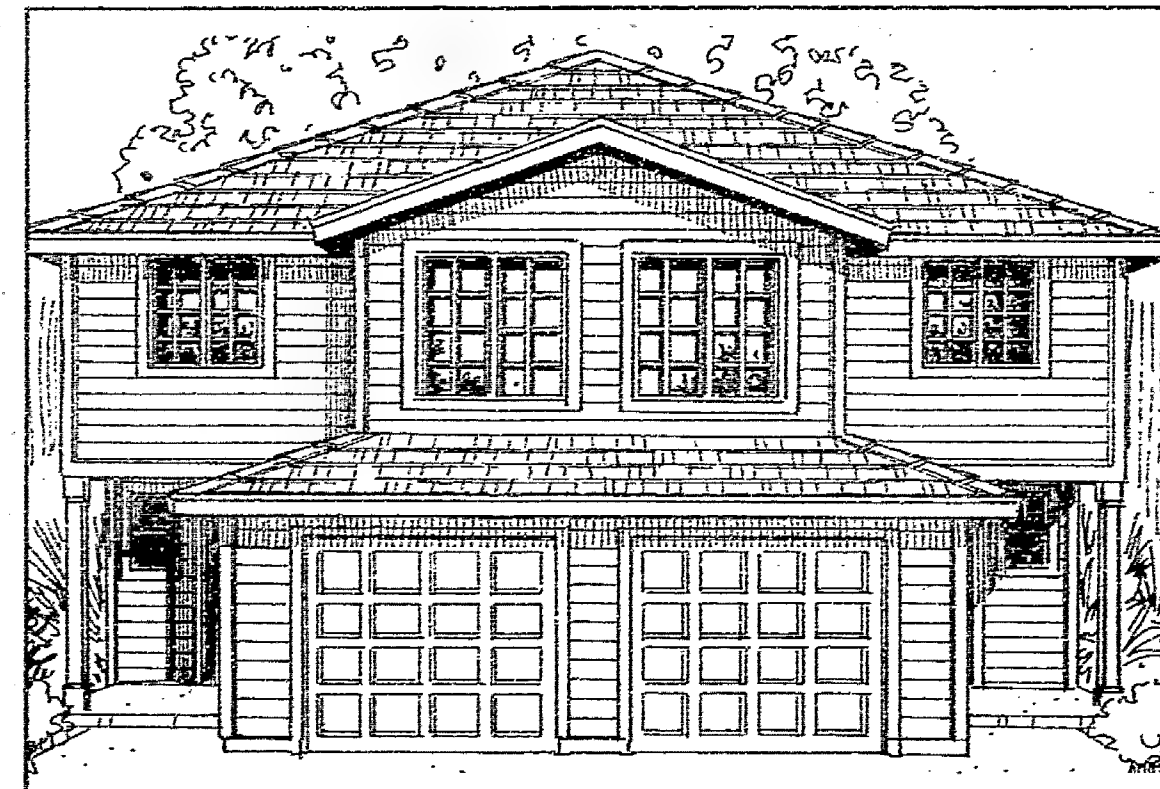

Laundry appliances are nearby in a pass-through utility hallway that links the house and garage. The powder room there is as handy for a quick dash in from playing, as it is convenient for the main floor rooms.

Upstairs, a large walk-in closet hides behind a pocket door in the master bathroom. The other three bedrooms share a bath, which is outfitted with a combination tub and shower. Linen storage is in good supply.

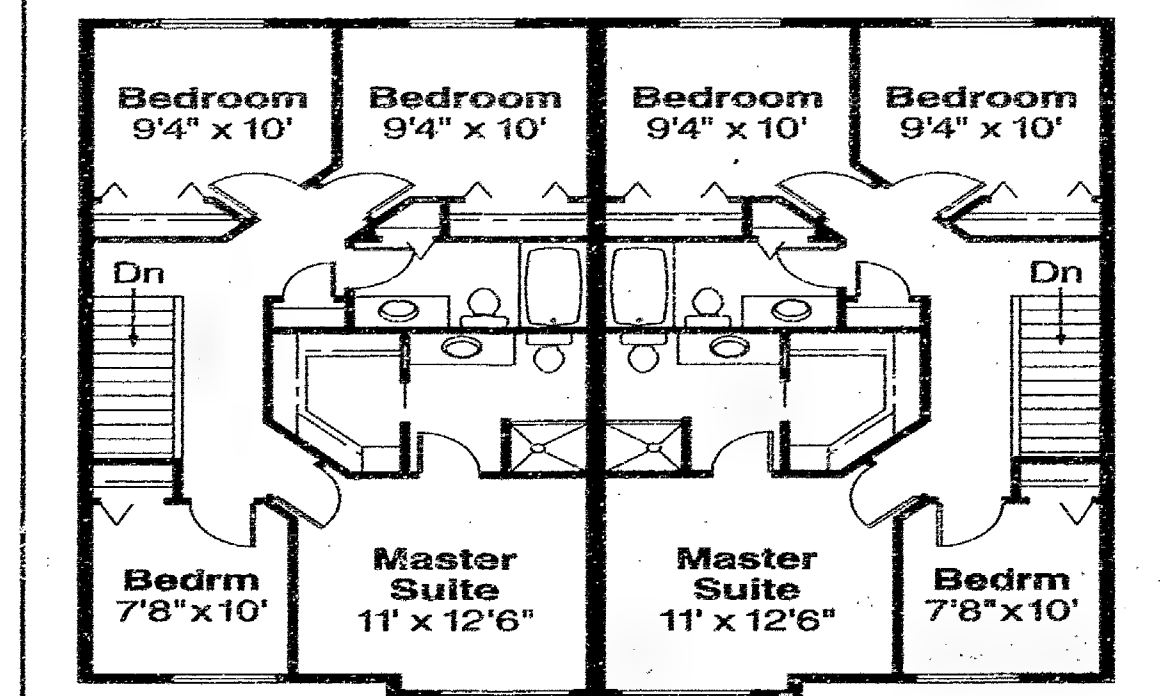

For a review plan, including scaled floor plans, elevations, section and artist's conception, send $25 to Associated Designs, 1100 Jacobs Dr., Dept. W, Eugene, OR 97402. Specify the Toliver 60-020 and include a return address when ordering.

A catalog featuring more than 400 home plans is available for $15.

DESIGN OF THE WEEK

Altamont features rustic look for get-away

Rustic logs, sparkling windows and crisp lines combine in the Altamont to create a striking vacation retreat. What's more, it's surprisingly economical to maintain.

Logs are renowned for their excellent insulating qualities, as well as their durability. The metal roof, too, is noted for its long life and ease of care.

At center is a naturally bright living room, V-shaped and vaulted. Windows are stacked three high in a front section open to the underside of the A-frame roof. Beneath the large loft covering the rear, a centrally located wood stove radiates enough heat to warm the entire space.

Two wings expand the main floor. A totally enclosed master suite fills one side, while the partially open kitchen is on the other. A raised eating bar, long room/utility room. Amenities in the cozy master suite include a roomy walk-in closet, and a private bathroom with dual vanity and a large spa tub.

The Altamont's loft is large enough to accommodate several sets of bunks. Doors on both sides provide access to deep storage spaces nestled under the sloping roof.

Outdoor living space is also abundant. A V-shaped deck wraps across the front.

For a review plan, including scaled floor plans, elevations, section and artist's conception, send $25 to Associated Designs, 1100 Jacobs Dr., Dept. W, Eugene, OR 97402.

Specify the Altamont 30-012 and include a return address when ordering. For more information call (800) 634-0123 or go to www.associateddesigns.com.
